

Indigenous Collection

Immerse in Australian First Nations' Knowledge & Culture

With a particular focus on First Peoples of Australia, Informit's Indigenous Collection offers broad scope for critical international engagement with topical and historical issues paramount to understanding Indigenous studies across the world.

Informit champions groundbreaking, Indigenous-led research in current fields, such as cultural and language revitalisation, biocultural knowledge, and decolonisation initiatives.

This interdisciplinary collection of journals and books gives a definitive voice to Indigenous communities in Australia, New Zealand and beyond.

Collection highlights:

- Centres on significant contemporary and historical perspectives of First Nations' cultures and experiences
- Ideal for education, business and academic sectors seeking a better understanding of matters impacting Indigenous populations across the world
- Dedicated to local content from and about Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities
- Global perspectives with articles by researchers worldwide, including New Zealand, South East Asia, Pacific region and North America
- Extensive coverage of current and historical information sources
- New articles added daily

Key titles

Our key titles include the following publications:

Key journal titles

The Collection includes almost 200 journals, including key titles:

- Australian Aboriginal Studies
- The Australian Journal of Indigenous Education
- Journal of Australian Indigenous Issues
- AlterNative
- Fourth World Journal
- Aboriginal and Islander Health Worker Journal
- And many more...

Key subjects

- Knowledges & worldviews
- Research Methodologies
- Colonial/Postcolonial Studies & Decolonisation
- Health
- Education
- Land care, Environment & Biocultural knowledge
- Law, Governance & Activism
- Language
- Arts & Culture
- Cultural Heritage
- History